

Methodology for the development of project management skills in Brazilian and Portugal public administration

By: Eliane Gonzales Meireles

The study shows the various aspects of project management in the public sphere and their implications for project results, with which it aims to find applied solutions so that project managers can carry out their activities with their teams in a simple, efficient, and effective manner.

Representação das competências divididas em 3 domínios
(IPMA, 2015)

Programa de inovação no setor público
Cavalcante et al.(2017)

The research methodology used in this study is based on multiple case studies, encompassing several interviews conducted with public agencies in Brazil and Portugal.

The results achieved in this study aim to contribute to the knowledge of the problems faced by teams involved in public projects and propose tools that project managers can use to achieve better results, mitigate conflicts and improve performance.